

GOOD WEEK

ROB VOERMAN 'UNITÉ' ARCHIVAL INKJET-PRINT MOUNTED ON ALUMINIUM, 2014. COURTESY UPSTREAM GALLERY, AMSTERDAM

DAME JUDI DENCH

Named patron of touring theatre company Shakespeare in the Squares.

ED SHEERAN

His album + (Divide) sold more copies in its first day (232,000) than any album did in a week in 2016.

BRIONY CLARKE

Became the UK's youngest-ever female judge, at the age of 31.

SWITCH

Nintendo's fastest-selling console in Europe: it shifted 80,000 units on its opening weekend in the UK alone.

VALENTINA TERESHKOVA

Honoured by Vladimir Putin at the Kremlin for being the first woman in space.

NATURAL HISTORY

BAD WEEK

WHITE RHINOS

Poachers broke into a French zoo to steal a rhino's horn, forcing keepers across Europe to increase security measures.

LORD HESELTINE

Sacked as a government adviser after spearheading a rebellion against the Brexit bill.

FACEBOOK

Scrutinised for not having security measures in place to remove all explicit photos of children.

MARY BERRY

Bolognese recipe with the unusual addition of white wine and double cream shocked the nation.

PARCELFORCE COURIERS

Will have to pay £250 penalty on top of revenue lost if they call in sick for work.

BEN CARSON

US Secretary of Housing & Urban Development

IMAGE OF THE WEEK

Stumbling block

"This is something a little different," writes Picture Editor Sophie Batterbury. "It is a photograph by Dutch artist Rob Voerman called 'Unité', from the exhibition 'Architecture as Metaphor', which opened at London's Griffin Gallery this week.

"I am fascinated by the cardboard cubes that have been used to interpret Corbusier's Unité d'Habitation building in Marseille, although at first it seems to be full-sized. The work is intended to question whether the utopian ideas of Modernism still apply in today's world. The exhibition runs until 21 April."

SNAPSHOT

@Phil_Lewis_ Nike is launching a range of sports hijabs.

@TravelMagazine easyJet all-female crew on International Women's Day.

LYNNE STEWART

DEFENCE LAWYER, 1939-2017
Lynne Stewart, a radical-leftist American lawyer who gained notice for representing violent, self-described revolutionaries, spent four years in prison herself, convicted of aiding terrorism.

A former librarian and teacher, she had taken up the law in the cause of social justice after seeing the squalor in the area around the school in Harlem where she taught. She built a reputation for representing the poor and the reviled. Believing

GREAT LIVES

DR THOMAS STARZL

SURGEON, 1926-2017
Thomas Starzl was not a stereotypical surgeon, bristling with self-confidence and brandishing his scalpel like a magic wand. His strongest memories were not of his successes, but his failures. His patients were always centre stage in his account of his life in the operating theatre and he remembered those who had died with a painful vividness that never left him.
His most important